

Dear NAME –

On October 2, 2019, a nationwide network will promote the benefits of energy efficiency during the third annual Energy Efficiency Day campaign. I'm reaching out to ask for your help in elevating energy efficiency by issuing a formal proclamation declaring October 2, 2019, as Energy Efficiency Day.

In 2018, more than 50 cities, counties and states issued official proclamations recognizing October 5, 2018 as Energy Efficiency Day – as did the U.S. Senate. Will you join us in amplifying pro-energy efficiency messaging through your own proclamation?

To make it easier, we've provided a template proclamation that you can adapt and customize to fit your needs. You're welcome to make any changes for NAME OF CITY/COUNTY/STATE.

To help promote your proclamation, we will post it on the Energy Efficiency Day website [LINK]—just send the file of the official signed declaration (or link) back to me and include info@resource-media.org. And for social media promotion, we'd love for you to take a photo of the signing that we (and you) can share with the hashtag #EEDay2019. Here is a widely shared thank-you video showing 2018 proclamations.

Proclamations also provide a valuable news hook: it's an opportunity to pitch a story to a news outlet – mainstream and trade publications – about what NAME OF CITY/COUNTY/STATE is doing to improve energy efficiency. Please share this information with the relevant outreach person at NAME OF CITY/COUNTY/STATE. Energy Efficiency Day provides a great hook to direct audiences back to your own online energy efficiency stories, tips and resources.

Wondering about the best time to issue an Energy Efficiency Day proclamation?

- Early enough to allow local residents to get involved (suggested by September 21)
- Early enough to issue a press release touting your energy-efficiency related activities, and give media time to cover the commitments already made to reduce energy waste (suggested by October 1)

Thank you in advance for helping to amplify #EEDay2019!
